

Title            Believing

Sub category    Poetry

Name            Mary Ricketson

Believing

Right there among new weeds and old growth never planned, a patch of multiflora rose thrives with deep pink petals, says I love you, to life all around. This beautiful flower rambles wild, gambles in sunshine, fresh breeze, and cold rain, climbs over fences, old chairs, covers the pasture one eager vine after another, right up to the edge of a cold-water river falling fast over red and gray rocks, on to forever.

Like the multiflora rose, I believe I will find a way to flower and thrive through my life, no matter how it all began.